Overview

Corona Virus (CV19) presents a dynamic challenge for all of us, and at present we are all in the stage of 'delaying the virus spread' around the general population by staying at home and physically distancing ourselves. We all have to play a huge part in flattening the curve to protect lives and the NHS, and we all defer to the current Government advice and any legal requirements that may be introduced to help with control measures.

There is likely to be a large social and economic impact as a result of CV19 which will present both an opportunity and a threat to us all, and though we of course advocate and encourage individuals to continue gaining more online marketing skills and knowledge, we have to all do our bit to be sensible.

Government Advice Sources

The primary source of current advice to the public for CV19 is at:

<https://www.gov.uk/guidance/coronavirus-covid-19-information-for-the-public>

For further health advice visit <https://111.nhs.uk/covid-19>

Internet Business School will follow government advice at all times and there will be NO meeting or training events held in person until restrictions are lifted.

Instead, for the foreseeable future we will be holding training events via an online conferencing platform so we can continue to train, help and support our students through this difficult period.

Our staff are all working remotely from home, and are as safe as possible, but still working to support our students. The office though at present do not have access to the main office phone number so all communication will be via email.

Please stay safe, stay healthy, and stay positive.
